

“THE KANSAS CITY MONARCHS IN OUR HOMETOWN”

Presented By: Phil Dixon

Dixon’s program is a unique blend of sports and the arts. He talks about Monarchs’ games played in various cities including North Platte from data he researched over years and blends in stories and poetry. In some cities the Monarchs competed against local teams, in others, they battled against Negro League teams or major league All-Star teams and players, a history that is unknown to most people. Games were generally against white players and teams. People who attend this presentation will hear stories of folks nationwide and some who once lived in North Platte, perhaps a relative or a neighbor. This is the kind of relevant local history Dixon combines with the history of African-American baseball in his Hometown presentation.
